

Dunafon Reaches Goal

Gubernatorial Hopeful Reaches 60,000 Likes On Facebook, Now The Hard Part

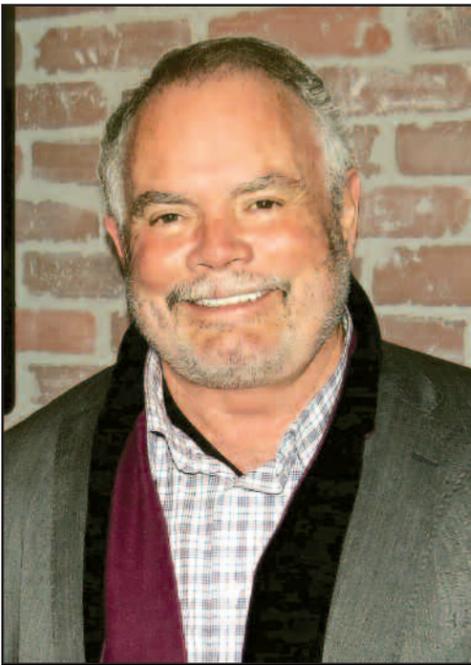

by Mark Smiley

Mike Dunafon, Mayor of Glendale, pledged that if he reached 60,000 likes on Facebook by his April 6 birthday, he would run for governor. On March 26, 2014, he achieved this goal, 11 days prior to his target date. As Dunafon approaches 60 years of age, his run for governor is now becoming a reality. Now, the hard work begins.

Dunafon who is primarily running his campaign through social media, videos on his YouTube channel, and a new Radio Free Glendale program premiering Saturday, March 29, on 560 AM, now must acquire 7,000 valid signatures by August 4 to be placed on the November 2014 ballot.

"Seven thousand signatures of Colorado registered voters doesn't sound too difficult until you have to go out there and get those signatures," stated Dunafon. "I am encouraged by making the goal with room to spare but the ultimate goal is, of course, getting voters to pull the lever for you on Election Day."

He has plenty of company in his efforts to unseat Democrat Governor Hickenlooper, including seven Republicans: Former Congressmen Bob Beauprez and Tom Tancredo, Senate Minority Leader Mike Kopp, State Senator Greg Brophy, Secretary of State Scott Gessler, businessman Steve House, and rancher Roni Bell Sylvester.

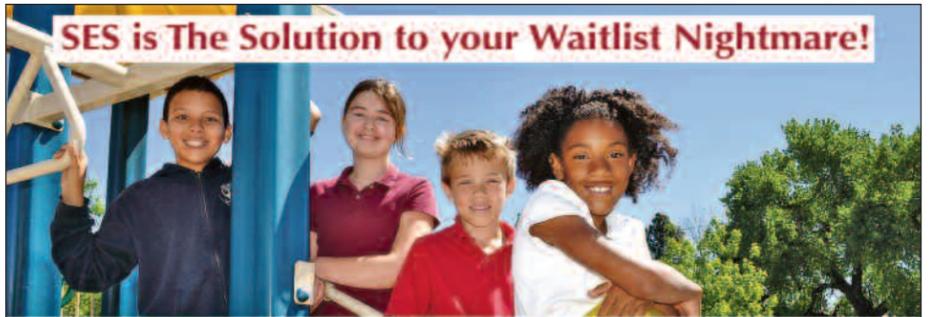

60 By 60: Mayor Mike Dunafon has surpassed 60,000 likes as he approaches 60 years of age. He is fulfilling his promise of running for Governor in the November 2014 election.

Dunafon does not have to relinquish his mayor's seat in Glendale in order to run for the governor's office. He has an uphill battle on his hands running as an independent but experts indicate that this election year is very much in flux.
